

Ericas Abecedarius for the Lexiphanically-inclined

Remember the alphabet books you've seen over the years, with authors re-using the same old words and phrases? A is for Apple. B is for Boat... Even young children enjoy variety, and authors need to remember not to talk down to them so much. And kids aren't the only ones who love language and learning. There are thousands of words available, not just nouns! What about all the wonderful verbs, adjectives, and adverbs that start with the letters? I challenged myself to write 26 lines: one for each letter, each line being a complete sentence, and with each word in that sentence starting with the appropriate letter. Some lines came fast and easy. Others required more work, and in two cases I had to play a little loose with the words to make them fit. As I worked, it became clear that this alphabet was intended for adults (or at least advanced readers), although my children have enjoyed most of the lines as I read them out loud. Even when they did not know what a quagga was, they loved the sounds of the lines.
